National Center for Law and Economic Justice Adds Three Prominent Attorneys to Its Board of Directors

(New York) – New York City attorneys Caitlin J. Halligan, Nancy A. Lieberman, and Brian S. Weinstein have recently joined the Board of Directors of the National Center for Law and Economic Justice (NCLEJ), a New York City-based nonprofit organization that advocates on behalf of low-income people.

Ms. Halligan, a former New York Solicitor General, heads Weil, Gotshal & Manges’s Appellate practice. Her pro bono efforts there have included arguing the 5th Circuit appeal in NCLEJ’s case challenging FEMA’s post-Katrina policies and practices.

Ms. Lieberman is a partner at Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom, specializing in mergers and acquisitions. She is a trustee of the University of Rochester and the Citizens Budget Commission.

Mr. Weinstein is a litigation partner at Davis Polk & Wardwell, where he was lead pro bono counsel for 36 Chinese immigrant workers who won a $4.6 million verdict for labor law violations. He served on the New York City Bar’s Committee on Pro Bono and Legal Services.

“We are fortunate to have such talented and committed lawyers join our Board as we use the law to assure that public agencies respond to the enormous needs of low-income families in this very difficult economy,” said NCLEJ Executive Director Henry A. Freedman in announcing the appointments.
